Types of Government

Monarchy - government by a family who have inherited the title of monarch.

Dictatorship - rule by an individual or group with no democratic aspects, total control by one person or group.

Democracy - rule by the people

Communist - government by one party - ultimate power to the state which 'looks after' its citizens (China).

One Party State - A state where only one political party exists and runs the country and is often associated with communist forms of government, e.g. Syria/ North Korea.

Anarchy - a state without any form of government/control. There could be a total breakdown of society, e.g. during Civil War.

Theocracy - Where the religious leaders run the country, e.g. Iran
Key Words:

Democracy: A system of government by the entire population or a majority of eligible citizens, usually through elected representatives.

Liberal Democracy: a system of government based on representative democracy and linked to freedoms and rights for citizens. USA, UK and EU follow this type of democracy.

Direct Democracy: a system of government where all citizens take part in decision making. A modern example of this is the use of referendums.

Representative Democracy: A system of government where citizens are elected to represent others in an assembly. A UK example would be an MP or a councillor.

What does democracy mean? A system of government by the entire population or a majority of eligible citizens, usually through elected representatives.

It includes the following aspects:

• Regular and fair elections
• An electoral system where there is a secret ballot and where the results reflect the views of the people. The results are also accountable.
• There are regular elections which makes the Government accountable.
• Any citizen can stand for election.
• Candidates can campaign equally without any fear of intimidation or bribery.
• The media can freely report on the work of Government.
• The judiciary is separate from government and citizens can use the legal process to hold government to account.

The Values underpinning democracy

• Rights – These are our legal, social and ethical entitlements and all citizens enjoy them equally. This structures how government operates, the law and morality of society e.g. Human Rights, children’s rights.
• Responsibilities – the state or fact of having to do something. We have duties as citizens of a society. E.g. pay taxes, obey the law, be called for jury service, conscription during war. These are not optional and underpinned by the law.
• Freedoms – the ability to act, speak or think as one wants. E.g. freedom of choice, freedom of the press, freedom of movement.
• The Rule of Law – everyone must obey the law not matter who they are e.g. gender, class, wealth, religion.
• Equality – This is how society treats its members. There should be equal treatment for all. There is legislation protecting different groups e.g. Sex Discrimination Acts 1975 and 1986; Race Relations Act 1965, 1968, 1976, 2000; Sexual Offences Act 2003, Marriage (Same Sex Couples) Act 2013; Disability Discrimination Act 1995 and 2005.

These now fall under the name of The Equality Act 2010 which is overseen by The Equality and Human Rights Commission.
Keywords:
Devolution: a process where power is shared between different bodies. In the UK there are separate elected bodies in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.
Devolved Bodies: National assemblies, parliaments in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.
Government: The individuals who run the state. In the UK we refer to ‘central government’, which is made up of the political parties that won the general election. The prime minister leads the government and appoints ministers.
Parliament: elected representatives who meet and debate and pass new laws. In the UK it is made up of: the House of Commons, House of Lords and the Monarch (Queen).
Political Literacy: have the political knowledge and understanding to take part in the political process e.g. to vote.

Role of Parliament
The major function of Parliament is to pass laws (legislation). There are 3 major types of laws:
1. Those proposed by the Government (Public Bills).
2. Those proposed by Individual MPs (Private Member’s Bills).
3. Those proposed on behalf of organisations e.g. Local government (Private Bills).

Government Bills (proposals for new laws) account for most of the laws passed.

Parliament also holds the government to account for its actions – MPs of any party can call for debates on topical issues. Committees of MPs and Lords can scrutinise (examine/analyse) proposed legislation in detail.

Political Party – group of people who share the political ideas and work together to achieve power at local or national level e.g. The Labour Party or the Conservative Party.

The Cabinet – senior members of the Government who hold ministerial jobs.
1. The law limits the number of ministers in the Cabinet.
2. Ministers receive more money than MPs.
3. The most senior ministers are the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Home Secretary and the Foreign Secretary.
4. Cabinet meets regularly at 10 Downing Street.
5. The Prime Minister chairs Cabinet meetings.
6. The Prime Minister decides who is in the Cabinet and can sack them at any time.

The Opposition – all parties not in government – who are ‘in opposition’ to the Government. The largest opposition party = Her Majesty’s Official Opposition’.

UK – currently Conservative Party form the Government, the Labour Party are the Official Opposition

General Elections – held every 5 years!

How laws are made – UK.
Key Words:
Prime Minister: the Head of Government. The monarch is the Head of State (In the USA, the President holds both posts). The Prime Minister is the leader of the largest party in the House of Commons and is an elected MP.
Legislature: a body normally elected that decides upon the laws that apply to a state. In the UK, Parliament is the legislature (in the USA, Congress is the legislature).
Civil Service: employees of the state who administer our public policy.
Political Parties: a group of people who share a common ideology and political beliefs and wishes to win elections in order to carry out their ideas.

The institutions of the British Constitution:
- The Power of government - government which is a body that makes, proposes and carries out the policy and laws.
- The Prime Minister and Cabinet
- The sovereignty of Parliament - Only Parliament can make and change laws.
- The roles of the legislature - Another name for Parliament which can make laws. This can be done through the House of Commons or House of Lords.
- The Opposition - the 'official opposition' is the name given to the largest party in the Commons not in power. The opposition are MPs representing parties not in government.
- Political Parties
- The Monarch
- Citizens
- The Judiciary
- The Police
- The Civil Service: The Civil Service is based upon three core principles:
  1. Impartiality - Civil Service serves the Crown and not a specific government.
  2. Anonymity - They should not be identified or associated with specific policies.
  3. Permanence - the stay in post when a government leaves office. They serve whichever government is in power.

The UK Constitution is described as being unwritten and uncodified.

The term government refers to a range of structures that operate within a state. They are usually prefixed by words such as central, national, regional or local. These refer to the geographical reach of the powers of these bodies. These different levels of government are often referred to as tiers of government.

Some authorities elect majors e.g. In London Sadiq Khan (Labour) is the Lord Mayor

Earl Shilton Town Council

At the grass roots level are town and parish councils including Earl Shilton Town Council which has 14 Councillors representing 4 Wards.

The Town Council acts as a consultee and lobbying force with both the County and District councils, putting forward the wishes and needs of the local community.

The list of the Statutory Spending Powers of Parish Councils gives examples of things that parish councils can do with legislation that provides the power to act and therefore to spend money on.

Responsibilities of Parish and Town Councils include:

- Allotments
- Cemeteries
- Footpaths
- Garbage Collection
- Sports Centres
- Street Cleaning
- Trading Standards
- Tree Preservation

The devolved powers can make decisions on areas such as agriculture, education, health and social care, housing and local government.
Key Words:
Local Elections: elections held for councillors to local councils, held on a fixed date in May after the fixed term of office has expired.
Lords Spiritual: the 26 bishops of the Church of England who are members of the House of Lords.
Voter Turnout: the percentage of voters who actually vote against the total number who are registered to vote.
Voter Apathy: a lack of interest by citizens in the electoral and political process.
Electoral Commission: a government-established body that monitors and oversees all UK elections and referendums.

Who can stand for election?
• Must be at least 18 years old.
• British Citizen, or a citizen of the Commonwealth or the Republic of Ireland.
• You cannot stand for more than one constituency.

You cannot stand for election if you are:
A Civil Servant; police; in the armed forces; a government nominated director of a commercial company; a judge; peer in the House of Lords (including bishops known as the Lords Spiritual).

Candidate Selection:
This varies between political parties. The usual method is as follows:
• Local party will advertise in party journal for people to apply.
• They have to be on a list approved by the National party.
• Local party workers will then draw up a short list after interviewing potential candidates.
• A ‘returning officer’ (a member of another local branch) will oversee the procedure for the party.
• The potential candidates are invited to attend a meeting of party members.
• The send a leaflet to all party members asking for their vote.

Who can vote in elections?
• A British Citizen or a member of the EU or Commonwealth living in the UK.
• Anyone 18 and over can register to vote.
• Not suffering any legal incapacity to vote.

Who cannot vote in elections?
• Members of the House of Lords.
• People in prison
• Anyone found guilty in the last 5 years of illegal practices in connection with an election.
• Been detained under certain sections of the Mental Health Act.

In Scotland the voting age for local and Scottish Parliament elections is 16.
Keywords:

Participation: to take part in something.

Apathy: lack of interest, enthusiasm, or concern e.g.

Voter Apathy is a lack of interest in voting, not casting your vote.

How can citizens participate in a democracy:

There are other ways to participate in a democracy other than voting – you can get involved in campaigning for a local or national pressure group to bring about change for example.

Participation may be quite limited, such as making a donation, or more active, such as:

1. Taking part in a campaign.
2. Raising funds.
3. Raising awareness.
4. Collecting names on a petition.
5. Lobbying or writing letters.
6. Meeting those you wish to convince/influence to help you make a change/improvement.
7. Taking part in direct action/protests.
8. Joining a political party.

Barriers to participation:

Language, access to education, poor housing, employment/unemployment, state of health, disability.

Voter Apathy – so what?

There is concern about the lack of citizen involvement in political process.

1. Membership of political parties is in decline – particularly amongst young people.
2. Young people often don’t vote in elections.
3. If young people don’t become engaged what is the future of democracy?
4. A ‘healthy’ democratic can be judged on the degree to which citizens are involved in society.
5. Number of people who vote in elections has declined since WWII.
6. Political parties have difficulty raising funds.
7. This can all mean small groups or individuals have too much influence on the political process.

Young People & Participation

Citizenship Education – introduced as a curriculum subject in 2003.

Many young people are involved in political protests via a range of groups and organisations.

A large number of young people do voluntary work and raise money for people in need.

Young people often interested in ‘single issues’ e.g. University fees.

Responses to Voter Apathy?

Make it easier to get a postal vote or consider use of on-line voting (concerns over fraud here).

Having voting over several days – including a Saturday when people have more time to vote.

Education about importance of voting and also policies of different parties.

Changing the voting system e.g. Proportional Representation.
Theme 3: Politics and Participation. How powers are organised

Barriers to participation in the democratic process:

People who do not participate give a range of reasons such as:

1. Lack of interest or Apathy
2. A belief that their participation will not make a difference
3. A lack of faith in politicians and the political process
4. A lack of information or understanding about how to participate
5. The issues are not important to them
6. They lead busy lives.

Some attempts have been made to make voting and registering easier, including making Citizenship compulsory in schools. Other suggestions include:

1. Compulsory voting
2. Lowering the voting age to 16
3. Allowing online voting. Allowing weekend voting
4. Changing polling hours
5. Opening polling stations in different locations
6. Encouraging postal voting or telephone voting.

It has been seen that young people will vote on issues they feel are relevant to them. 109,000 16-17 year olds registered to vote for the Scottish referendum, making the final turnout 84%
Membership of UK political parties:
As of July 2016:
- Labour has 515,000 members
- Scottish National Party 120,000
- Liberal Democrats 76,000
- Green Party (England and Wales) 55,500
- UKIP 39,000
- Plaid Cymru (Wales) 8,300
- Conservative Party had 149,800 members – this was as of December 2013 (latest published figure)

The SNP is now the UK’s second largest political party, but overall party membership in the UK remains tiny when compared to other countries in Europe. Several parties in the EU have more members than Labour, the Conservatives and the Lib Dems combined.

Reasons FOR Lowering the Voting Age to 16.
- Scotland’s positive experience of including 16- and 17-year-olds in the 2014 independence referendum led to the lowering of the voting age for local and Holyrood elections.
- Young people should have a say in matters that directly affect them, such as tuition fees.
- After the Scottish Referendum a study by the University of Edinburgh during the referendum found that some teenagers were initially doubtful of their own abilities to make the right decision, but that this led them to actively seek out information to help inform their judgement.
- Lowering the limit will encourage civic-mindedness at an earlier age and establish an interest in the political system, which will be continued throughout a person’s life.

Reasons AGAINST Lowering the Voting Age to 16.
- 16-year-olds haven’t yet entered the world of home ownership, employment, tax or pensions but these economic issues are often at the forefront of election campaigns. They are not relevant to 16 year olds.
- Lack of experience in the matters above prevents young people from making a considered judgement at the ballot box.
- 18- to 24-year-olds have the lowest turnout of any age group in elections, reflecting an apparent lack of interest in politics so why would a 16 year old be any better?
- Teenagers who do want to cast their votes would be impressionable and easily influenced by radical politics, or would not fully think things through and would blindly vote for the same party as their parents.

Electoral Reform Society: The Electoral Reform Society is a founding member of the Votes at 16 coalition. Votes at 16 are not just supported by the SNP, Labour, Liberal Democrats and the Greens – but also by the leader of the Scottish Conservatives, Ruth Davidson.
Key Words:
Command Economy: a national economy where all elements of the economic system are controlled by the government.

Market Economy: a national economy where most of the economy is run by the private sector and the state owns and runs limited elements.

Mixed Economy: a national economy that has elements run and owned by the state and others run by the private sector.

Budget: an annual statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the House of Commons about the taxation and spending policy for the forthcoming year.

Nationalised: where the state owns and runs a part of the economy.

Real Government spending: the change in the amount government spends after taking account of inflation.

Manifesto: a document provided by a political party at the time of an election outlining the policies it would like to introduce.

Gross Domestic Product (GDP): the value of all the goods and services created in a country, normally measured on an annual basis.

Government Spending:

The Government spends its money on things such as:
- Paying interest on its debts,
- Public order and safety,
- Housing and Environment,
- Industry, Agriculture and Employment,
- Defence,
- Education,
- Transport,
- Social Services
- Health

Impact of Government Spending/Cuts:

Ways in which governments raise and spend money have a huge impact on citizens.

1. Raising university fees
2. Raising the rate of VAT
3. Introducing a 'bedroom tax', cutting certain benefits
4. Introducing a 'bedroom tax', cutting certain benefits can mean some people have less income.

If more money is being spent the Government has to decide whether to raise taxes or increase the money it borrows (public debt).

In 2008 the UK economy went into recession - there was a FALL in the number of things Britain made or sold, like food, cinema tickets and cars. That meant that for the first time in years, our economy was shrinking instead of growing. This led to a period of austerity - government measures to reduce public spending.

Government Income:
- Council Tax
- Business Rates
- VAT
- Corporation Tax
- Income Tax
- National Insurance
- Excise Duty (e.g. Tax on alcohol, cigarettes)

UK Government Spending:

- Pensions and welfare benefits: 27%
- Personal social services: 5%
- Health: 18%
- Transport: 3%
- Education: 13%
- Defence: 5%
- Industry, agriculture, employment & training: 4%
- Housing and environment: 4%
- Public order & safety: 6%
- Debt interest: 5%

Key Words:
Constituencies: a named geographical area consisting on average of about 65,000 voters which elects a single MP to the UK Parliament.
First Past the Post: an election system based upon the candidate with the highest number of votes cast being elected.
Proportional: a system of voting whereby the number of people elected relates to the number (percentage) of votes cast.
Supplementary voting: a voting system used in the UK where voters have a second vote which is used in the election process if no candidate gets 50 percent of the first choice votes.

Some people want the voting system changed in the UK from First Past the Post because the number of seats won does not reflect the number of votes (see the table on the right for the results of the 2017 election)
Theme 3: Politics and Participation. Where does Political Power reside?

"Democracy"

\[\text{noun:} \]
a system of government by the entire population or a majority of eligible citizens, usually through elected representatives.

First Past the Post

- The UK is split into 650 constituencies - in each one voters put a cross in the box next to their preferred candidate.
- The candidate with the most votes becomes the MP for that constituency.
- The party with the overall majority of seats becomes the party of government.

Single Transferable Vote (STV)

STV is a form of Proportional Representation, and aims to ensure that as little votes as possible get wasted.

- Voters rank candidates on the ballot paper in order of preference - their favourite as number 1, second favourite as number 2, etc. They do not have to rank every single one.
- Candidates need a set amount of votes in order to be elected. This means that if someone’s first-choice candidate does not meet this requirement and will not get elected, their votes get moved to their second choice.

In the end, rather than just sending one MP, constituencies are able to send a ‘team’ of MPs that best represents the spread of votes in that area.

STV is used to elect the Northern Ireland Assembly, in Scottish local elections and in most elections in the Republic of Ireland.

The Alternative Vote System (AV)

AV is one of the most common majority systems - it is not Proportional Representation.

- If one of the candidates immediately wins an overall majority - over 50% of the votes - then they are automatically elected. However, this is not always the case!

Ballot Paper

- Candidate A 4
- Candidate B 2
- Candidate C 1
- Candidate D 5
- Candidate E 3

In 2011, a referendum was held to change the electoral system in the UK to AV - but only 32% voted in favour.

If no-one gets a majority, the candidate with the fewest first-choice votes is eliminated, and their votes move to the second preference. This process continues until one candidate has the majority of votes.

Key Words:

Two Party System: a political system that is dominated by two political parties, each of which may at some time form a government.

New Right: a view of conservatism (linked to Margaret Thatcher in the 1980s) that limiting the impact of the state on business and lowering taxation and what services the state provided was the best means of increasing national wealth and allowed for personal empowerment and increased social mobility.

Individual Liberty: the concept that in a modern democracy people have the freedom to make their own choices and decisions.

Tolerance: a concept based upon the idea that in a modern society people show understanding of others with differing views and opinions.

Political Ideology – This is the different ideas and policies that political parties have and the values that help a political party decide on any political issue. Traditionally political parties have been labelled as being to the right, left or centre.

Examples of how the Manifestos differ between the different Political Parties.
Key Words:
Scrutinise: examine and inspect closely and thoroughly the work of government.
Private Members Bill: a bill, a draft for law, that is proposed by an MP.
Public Bills: bills proposed by government ministers.
Private Bills: bills promoted by organisations e.g. local authorities or private companies.
Hybrid Bills: these mix the characteristics of public and private bills. These would affect the general public as well as specific groups and individuals e.g. the construction of the HS2 rail line.
NDPBs: non-departmental public bodies, formerly quangos.
Quangos: quasi autonomous non-government organisations. These are bodies that work with the government, sometimes carrying out services on behalf of the government and funded by government.

Ways in which Parliament can hold the government to account?
• Questions – MPs can ask ministers and the Prime Minister questions; Prime Ministers Questions (PMQs) - these are questions answered by the PM every Wednesday. The Leaders of the Opposition get first opportunity to ask questions then the back bench MPs can.
• Work of committees – Committees work for Parliament and draft laws. Select committees investigate the work of each government department. These committees can demand answers to questions.
  Backbench Business Committees can select motions for debate such as e-petitions that have had over 100,000 signatures.
• Debates– MPs can also take part in Parliamentary debates. They can allow MPs and Lords to discuss government policy, propose new laws and current issues. At the end of the debate a vote is taken.

The Legislative Process (How laws are made)
In order to become a law, an idea must be set out in writing. It then goes through various parliamentary stages before it is signed into law by the monarch. These stages are shown in Figure 7.3.

The Green Paper
Often the Government will publish a ‘Green Paper’, which is a discussion document about a possible new law, and invite MPs and others to comment upon its suggestions. It is called Green because the cover is green.

The First Reading
The Government then publishes a ‘White Paper’, which is a proposal for a new law. This becomes a Bill (draft law) and is formally announced (First Reading) in the House of Commons. No debate takes place at this time.

The Second Reading
This stage involves a debate upon the principle of the proposed legislation and a vote takes place at the end of the debate.

The Committee Stage
This stage comes next, where a group of MPs from all parties discuss the Bill in detail, line by line, and vote on amendments.

The Report Stage
The work of the committee is discussed and voted upon in the House of Commons.

The Third Reading (or Final Stage)
The amended legislation is voted upon and the legislation is then sent to the House of Lords where all the same stages from First Reading to Third Reading are gone through. If the Lords make amendments, the Bill returns to the House of Commons where further votes take place until the Bill is accepted.

The Royal Assent
The legislation then receives Royal Assent – it is agreed and signed by the monarch – and then becomes Law.

The Civil Service and its employees play an important role in British life by making sure that the Government policy is carried out. Although it serves the Government of the day, it is politically independent by which it ensures the functioning of the system, stability and security.
Powers of the Prime Minister and Cabinet
Prime Ministers have certain constitutional powers. Although there is Cabinet government in the UK, the Prime Minister’s power is assured through ‘primus inter pares’: first among equals.
How well they use these powers depends on their personality and political style.
The Prime Minister does not have the constitutional authority a US President has. The Prime Minister is not directly elected by the voters. A governing party can replace the Prime Minister without consulting the voters, as Labour did when it elected Gordon Brown to replace Tony Blair in 2007.
Most MPs seek promotion. The PM can use this ambition to ensure loyalty. Sometimes a Prime Minister will appoint rivals into the Cabinet. Prime Ministers can use the protocol of ‘collective responsibility’ to silence Cabinet critics. Once a cabinet meeting, chaired by the Prime Minister makes a decision, all cabinet Ministers must support it, whether they agree with it or not. If they speak out in public, they must resign. Examples of ministers who spoke out against the war in Iraq were Clare Short and the late Robin Cook.
The Prime Minister can re-shuffle Cabinet Ministers to different Cabinet posts. He has the power of appointment of junior ministers, senior civil servants, bishops and judges.

Special advisers
Prime ministers, and other ministers, often appoint special advisers. They are an additional resource for the Minister, providing assistance from a standpoint that is more politically committed and politically aware than would be available to them from the Civil Service.
Some are critical of how much special advisers are consulted compared to Cabinet colleagues.
Ceremonial Roles and key parliamentary roles

<td>The Speaker</td>
<td>The Speaker of the House of Commons is elected to the post by their fellow MPs. They chair debates in the Commons Chamber. The Speaker is the chief officer and has the highest authority in the Commons. The Speaker interprets the rules of the House. They can bar members, decide who speaks and can call ministers to the House to make statements. There are three Deputy Speakers who can also chair sittings of the House. They are also elected by their fellow MPs. They are known as: ● the Chairman of Ways and Means ● the First Deputy Chairman of Ways and Means ● the Second Deputy Chairman of Ways and Means. Once elected, these MPs withdraw from any active political role. The Lord Speaker is elected by members of the House of Lords. Politically impartial, they are responsible for chairing the debates in the Lords chamber and offering advice on procedure.</td>

<tr>
<td>Whips</td>
<td>Whips are MPs or Members of the House of Lords appointed by each party in Parliament to help organise parliamentary business and to ensure that their party’s MPs turn out and vote according to the party’s wishes. Every week, whips send out a notice (called ‘The Whip’) to their MPs and Lords detailing parliamentary business for the week and giving instructions on how to vote.</td>

<tr>
<td>Frontbench MPs</td>
<td>Frontbenchers sit on the front green benches nearest to the Speaker in the House of Commons. On the government side this is where ministers sit, and on the opposition benches is where the shadow ministers representing the official opposition party sit.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Backbench MPs</td>
<td>A backbencher is an ordinary MP who holds no government or opposition post so therefore sits behind the front bench on the backbenches.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Black Rod</td>
<td>Black Rod is a senior officer in the House of Lords. They are responsible for its security. Black Rod is also the Secretary to the Lord Great Chamberlain and is responsible for and participates in the major ceremonial events at the Palace of Westminster, for example during the State Opening of Parliament.</td>

Key Words:
Lobbying: a campaigning method whereby traditionally members of the public spoke to their MP in the central lobby at the House of Commons to enlist their support for their cause.

House of Commons: the first chamber of Parliament made up currently of 650 elected members. The government is formed based on the composition of this chamber. It is a legislative chamber that also holds the government to account.

E-petitions: a means whereby petitioning can take place online. The government has introduced its own system and many campaign groups have set up their own systems to gather support.

Human Rights: these are basic rights and freedoms to which all people are entitled. Since the end of the Second World War, these rights have been written into a large number of international charters.

E-petitions are an easy way to have concerns heard by Government and Parliament. E-petitions enable members of the public to petition the House of Commons and press for action from the government. E-petitions have to ask for a specific action from the government or the House of Commons and should be about something which the Government or the House of Commons is responsible for. A petition will need to be supported by at least six people before it is published on the petitions site for other people to sign.

An e-petition will stay open on the e-petitions website for six months. If the Petitions Committee decides that a petition should be debated in the main House of Commons Chamber, it would take that request to the Backbench Business Committee. The Petitions Committee will take the threshold of 100,000 signatures as a starting point when it considers which petitions should be debated.

But sometimes the Committee might not put forward a petition for debate if it’s got over 100,000 signatures - for example, if the same subject has recently been debated or if a debate is going to happen soon. If that’s the case, we’ll tell you how you can find out more about parliamentary debates on the issue raised by your petition.
